In most parts of the country the backyard grill is still in storage. So what do you do for the next couple months when you want a great steak?

Our favorite methods are pan-searing and pan-roasting with an accompanying sauce or a compound butter. You'll be amazed at how a simple steak preparation can take on any style or personality depending on the sauce or butter that serves as a finishing touch.

Start with our master recipe for pan-searing or pan-roasting the perfect steak ... any cut of steak will work with these directions. Then choose a sauce or compound butter that suits your fancy. Most of the following sauces can be made in a jiffy while your steak is cooking.

Be sure to check our charts below to help you estimate cooking times, based on the thickness of your steak.

Smoked Salmon for Lent

SMOKED SALMON
Giving up red meat for Lent? You won't miss out on flavor with our Black Label Smoked Salmon.

It's light on the palate with a clean, delicate taste and complex flavors—with a smokiness that is subtle, not heavy-handed.

After several washes of fresh orange and lemon juices, fresh—never frozen—Atlantic salmon is salt-cured, smoked, and finished in successive baths of fresh, whole milk and dry white wine.

Pan-Searing

1. Steaks should always be at room temperature before they are cooked. Remove your steaks from the refrigerator at least 30 minutes before cooking. Pat them dry with a paper towel.
2. Place a dry cast-iron skillet in a pre-heated broiler on high heat about 6 inches from flame or heating element. Heat pan for about 20 minutes.
3. Brush the steaks with olive oil and rub with coarse kosher or sea salt and freshly ground pepper.
4. CAUTION: Pan handle will be extremely hot. When the pan is heated, pull the oven rack out to give yourself clear access to the pan and lay the steaks carefully into the skillet to avoid splatters. Your vent or fan should be set on high because this method creates a fair amount of smoke as the steak is seared.
5. Sear the steaks for 2 to 3 minutes on each side.
6. After the steaks are seared, reduce the heat to moderately hot to hot and continue cooking the steaks to a desired doneness using the timing suggestions in the chart below.
7. Transfer the steaks to dinner plates or a platter, and let rest 5 minutes before slicing and serving.

Pan-Roasting

1. Steaks should always be at room temperature before they are cooked. Remove your steaks from the refrigerator at least 30 minutes before cooking. Pat them dry with a paper towel.
2. Preheat your oven to 375°F.
3. On the stovetop, heat an ovenproof frying pan or skillet (cast iron is great) on high heat until the pan smokes slightly or a drop of water evaporates on contact.
4. Brush the steaks with olive oil and rub with coarse kosher or sea salt and freshly ground pepper.
5. When the pan is heated, lay the steaks carefully into the skillet to avoid splatters. Your vent or fan should be set on high because this method creates a fair amount of smoke as the steak is seared.
6. Sear the steaks for 2 to 3 minutes on each side.
7. Put the pan directly into the oven and roast the steaks to a desired doneness using the timing suggestions in the chart below.
8. Transfer the steaks to dinner plates or a platter, and let rest 5 minutes before slicing and serving.
